Drum Circle

Stacey Bowers

Drum circles are popping up everywhere throughout the modern world—in wellness programs, professional workshops, company retreats, somatic and psycho-spiritual practices, and various recreational activities.

Drumming is one of the simplest things a group of people can do to come together and unite in peace, harmony, and love. It puts us in touch with a creative force that directly connects us to our own humanity.

Stacey will simply guide the rhythms of the music in the group setting of the drum circle. You may participate with a percussion instrument, clapping hands, or stomping feet. Each individual is equally valuable to the whole. Eventually individual participation gives rise to a rhythm that is intrinsically linked to the contribution of all members of the drum circle.

All ages and levels welcome. It's FUN, inclusive, and spontaneous! Some instruments will be available to use but we encourage you to bring your own.

No prior experience necessary. It's about connection and community and something as basic as the rhythm of your very own heart-beat!

Don't be shy, Stacey is a really nice guy and loves to encourage self-expression—plus drumming is a great way to reduce stress. Come join us and be a part of the circle!

At the end of the drum circle, participants will have the chance to win one of two door prizes: a Remo Konga Drum ($70 value) and a Remo Gathering Drum ($170 value).

Grandmother's Whisper Talk and Book Signing

Inette Miller 'Imaikalani and
'Iokepa Hanalei 'Imaikalani

When Inette Miller—a single mother, former war correspondent, nice Jewish girl, and respected journalist—traveled to Hawaii for a week's vacation, little did she dream that she would stay for a lifetime. And not a lifetime of luxury in paradise, either, but a grueling physical and spiritual journey that would tax every desire and concept she ever held dear. For on that vacation she met 'Iokepa Hanalei 'Imaikalani, guardian of the Aboriginal Hawaiian Culture, who was “living rough” on a beach in Kaua'i and seeking a way to bring his deep insights to his own people and to the world. Inette Miller 'Imaikalani, the author of Grandmother's Whisper—Ancient Voices, Timeless Wisdom: A Modern Love Story, will be joined by her now-husband, 'Iokepa, for an evening of authentic and experiential teachings of the Hawaiian Grandmothers. The seminar will awaken the ancient wisdom-ritual and practices that dissipate anger, prevent violence, and foster harmony, and will share the teachings' profound implications for the 21st century. At this unique literary event, 'Iokepa will chant; he and Inette will share their stories; and Inette will read from her book, Grandmothers Whisper, which won the national 2011 Visionary Award for Book of the Year for excellence in spiritual writing. The event will offer ample time for discussion and book signing. For further information see: www.ReturnVoyage.com.
